Did you know that some of today’s largest and most successful companies began with a quick sketch on a napkin? Want to quickly convey your ideas visually? Rapid Visualization teaches you how to use a multitude of analog and digital design tools and materials to quickly communicate your ideas and concepts visually.

Can computers cause you to change what you think and do? Can they motivate you to stop smoking, or convince you to conserve water when you shower? The answer is “yes!” This course provides an overview of various persuasive technologies, including concepts, theory, tools, and applications in a project-based setting.

Need to build an interactive web site? Want to more fully engage your web site users? This course teaches you the tools and basic languages involved in designing interactive web experiences. Students will build and publish a web site with user-centric, interactive features.

Do you need to incorporate sound and audio into your work? Advanced Sound and Audio delves into the worlds of sound, acoustics, psychoacoustics, and audio equipment and is a perfect entrée for those wishing to work with sound in some manner.